

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An electronic drive system using a plurality of drive circuits for enabling greater plurality of functions by selectively placing drive signals on the driver outputs at one of two possible polarities. At least one of the enabled functions taking a substantially shorter time for enablement, thereby allowing at least two of the plurality of functions to share a common driver output enabling signal.